Forex News

The dollar traded mixed. It lost ground to the euro at 1.1678 and sterling at 1.3648, both four basis points firmer, while gaining on the franc and the yen.

Commodity currencies led. AUD/USD rose 78 basis points to 0.7175, the session's largest major move, alongside gold's 3.64% advance, while USD/CAD slipped 13 basis points to 1.3764.

USD/JPY at 158.94, up 42 basis points, keeps official rhetoric on yen weakness live; USD/CHF firmed 38 basis points to 0.8008. Central-bank speeches and US data set the next direction.

Local News

- The dinar's dollar peg, unchanged since 1995, holds; no new Central Bank of Jordan or Department of Statistics release was confirmed over the weekend.
- Amman Stock Exchange opens the week Sunday after Thursday's close; gold's rally and a softer dollar frame regional sentiment. No verified fresh index level.

International and Regional News

- Gold settled 3.64% higher at $4,680.60 an ounce, the standout move across asset classes.
- Silver gained 2.21% to $69.53 an ounce, tracking bullion rather than industrial demand.
- Brent rose 0.65% to $94.39 while WTI fell 0.88% to $87.06, widening the spread past $7.
- The WTI-Brent divergence points to US inventory and logistics factors rather than a global supply disruption.
- Precious metals strength alongside a softer dollar is consistent with rate-cut positioning rather than pure risk aversion.
- The Australian dollar outperformed every major, the typical response to a metals-led commodity rally.
- Yen weakness near 159 per dollar remains the clearest policy-divergence trade among G10 currencies.

On This Day in Finance

- 2011: Gold spiked to a then-record near $1,900 an ounce, the peak of the post-downgrade, euro-debt-crisis flight into bullion.
- 1973: A botched robbery at Kreditbanken in Stockholm began the six-day siege that gave the world the term Stockholm syndrome.
